Benefits to you

All of our Corporate Friends will be clearly identified both in the Museum and on our website.

If you are an organisation involved with any aspect of vaccine development, the Museum and its website provide a very positive message of the benefits of vaccines through the story of Jenner and the subsequent global eradication of smallpox. This extends to relevant commentary on the science of immunology and the general importance of current vaccines to public health.

By supporting the Museum you will be helping to spread this message and promote immunisation in a positive light.

Corporate Friends will have access to the Museum for hospitality events, product launches and product promotion, conferences, staff training, team-building etc. The Museum can provide:

- A splendid 18th century period setting located in attractive grounds.
- Unique access to the history of Edward Jenner, the birth of the science of vaccination and a broad view of the significance of vaccination to public health world wide. This can add interest and meaning to any gathering concerned with vaccination.
- A broader heritage experience with its immediate neighbours, Berkeley Castle and 13th century St Mary's Church (where Jenner is buried beside the altar).

Full details on the accommodation we can provide can be found in the accompanying document.

You will have the opportunity to network with other Corporate Friends at Museum events and use the Museum's facilities for your own events at a discounted rate.

You will also be the first to hear about opportunities to become more involved in the Museum's work with the community including sponsorship opportunities that meet the aims and objectives of your organisation. Your association with the museum will enhance your brand awareness and demonstrate appreciation for employees, clients and the wider community.

Please read the accompanying document to find out about our current work and plans for the future.

The Museum runs a Friends Scheme for individual and family supporters. We have benefited from many friends since the 1960s, from the enthusiastic group that undertook the original fundraising to establish the museum, to the trustees and volunteers who regular give their time. All are motivated by their interest in and admiration for Edward Jenner.

We look forward to welcoming your organisation as another valued Friend.

The Trustees and management of the Museum are always open to suggestions from friends.

Your contributions will help ensure the continued existence of this internationally important site and the legacy of Edward Jenner's life and work for future generations.
